

T7A01 (C)

What is a good thing to have when operating a hand-held transceiver away from home?

- A. A selection of spare parts
- B. A programming cable to load new channels
- C. One or more fully charged spare battery packs
- D. A dummy load

T7A02 (B)

Which of these items would probably not be very useful to include in an emergency response kit?

- A. An external antenna and several feet of connecting cable
- B. A 1500 watt output linear amplifier
- C. A cable and clips for connecting your transceiver to an external battery
- D. A listing of repeater frequencies and nets in your area

T7A03 (B)

How can you make the signal from a hand-held radio stronger when operating in the field?

- A. Switch to VFO mode
- B. Use an external antenna instead of the rubber-duck antenna
- C. Stand so there is a metal building between you and other stations
- D. Speak as loudly as you can

T7A04 (C)

What would be a good thing to have when operating from a location that includes lots of crowd noise?

- A. A portable bullhorn
- B. An encrypted radio
- C. A combination headset and microphone
- D. A pulse noise blanker

T7A05 (C)

What is a method used to locate sources of noise interference or jamming?

- A. Echolocation
- B. Doppler radar
- C. Radio direction finding
- D. Phase locking

T7A06 (B)

Which of these items would be the most useful for a hidden transmitter hunt?

- A. Binoculars and a compass
- B. A directional antenna
- C. A calibrated noise bridge
- D. Calibrated SWR meter